

A letter from one of our customers...

Hi Nature's Cargo,

I don't know what spirit led you to call your beautiful blend of salts "sacred" but it has taken me on an interesting train of thoughts. It is time we all took another look at what we have done to the gifts of Mother Earth. So many things that were once sacred, and used in ceremony and for sustaining life fell into the realm of the profiteers -- and the profane. This even includes tobacco and alcohol, as well as salt. At very least we take too many things for granted. "Sacred Salts" have shaken me into a special consciousness about how precious this gift is, not just for food, but also for healing. The choice of words has made it easy for me to pass this message on to others, and many people are ready for it and excited.

It did not take long after receiving that first lovely sample pack to realize I was looking at an extraordinarily balanced blend of salts. It includes salts from fire and water, from Northern and Southern hemisphere, from Eastern and Western hemispheres, from high and low. Add to that mention, in a spiritual book I happened to be reading at the time, of the Himalayan mountains holding masculine energy, and the Andes holding feminine energy. The black and white are reminiscent of our world of duality, and then there is the pink, which looks like rose quartz.... heart chakra. My most recent poster, black and white with a dash of red, has the message "In a world of duality, the answer is love." (I created it as a wedding invitation.)

Thanks so much for this wonderful offering.

Black salts from the Hawaiian Islands, pink salts from the Himalayan mountains, crystal salts from the Pacific ocean, and rose salts from the Andes mountains in Peru.
Ancient cultures have used these unique varieties of salts for centuries. Unprocessed, unrefined and high in natural minerals.
